For Old Malarial Sufferers.

No More Quinine or Any Other Poison, Vegetable or Mineral.

Extract from a Lecture Delivered at the Surgical Hotel, Columbus, Ohio, by Dr. S. B. Hartman,

To permanently cure any case of fever and ague a remedy must combine two genthe powers of the system to resist the malarial poison and neutralize or destroy the poison itself. The best that can be said of cinchona or any of its preparations is that they stimulate the system tempo-rarily to resist the action of the maiarial poison. Quinine powerfully arouses the vital powers to throw off the poison, but it vital powers to throw off the poison, but it is more and more apparent to the advocates of this remedy that it cannot destroy the It is for this reason that the patient must continue to take these drugs incessantly or be liable to have another attack. Unfortu-nately, the system soon becomes accus-tomed to the stimulating effect, and then they will utterly fail to protect or in any way affect the patient, except to terribly derange the bodily functions and depress the nervous system. In Pe-ru-ua, as given in my formulæ now prepared by the Pe-ru-ua Medicine com-pany, advantage is taken of the beneficial action of Peruvian bark, but it is upon the peculiar combination with the other ingre-dients of this remedy that I chiefly rely for the permanent cure of any kind of malari-ous disease. In this compound the antiperiodic action of cinchona is assisted by cedron (another South American remedy of great value), so combined with other med-icinal ingredients as to destroy effectually the maiarial poison which saturates the

A person taking a course of treatment with Pe-ru-na for any malarial affection will find not only that he will be relieved quicker than with quinine, but that his sys-tem is not deranged in the slightest particular by the drug. Pe-ru-na gently stimulates the nervous system to resist the malarial poison, and at the same time gradually eliminates the poison itself from the sys-tem, which quinine or similar preparations cannot do. In old cases of malaria, where the victim has gone the round of all sinds of treatment, has hopefully swallowed everything recommended for the chills, and still continues to have them at the slightest exposure to cold, wet or fatigue, P. ru-na demonstrates its superiority over all other medicines by permanently curing all such The dose suited to this class of malarial patients is as directed on the bottle. The laxative Man-alin should also be taken whenever the fiver or bower, have become deranged, as is compony the case of old malarial subjects.

A UNIQUE TRADE.

A NEBRASKA FARMER GIVES A FARM FOR A WIFE

A Story of Marriage Without Love, a Divorce and Marriage for Love-A Romantic Affair, but not Mere Romance.

Special Correspondence of the Cazette. BEATRICE, NEB., Oct. 15 .- The details of one of the most unique trades ever con-summated in this part of the country have just come to light through the filing for re-cord of a deed to a trac tof land in the western part of the county. The deed is from Chris Christensen to Nils Jensen, and conveys eighty acres of farm land to the latter, but the remarkable part of the deed is the consideration which is given for the land. It reads as follows: "For and in consideration of one woman, to-wit: the wife of Nils Jensen." This queer docu-ment caused an investigation to be made. one of the most unique trades ever conment caused an investigation to be made and the following romantic story was learned by the curious newspaper man who

vent to the farm of Christensen: Nine years ago Christensen left Sweden for this country to make his fortune, and when he started he left in the old country a young woman who was to be his wife as soon as he became able to send after her. This girl, Mina Petersen, was the daughter of a poor, drunken shoemaker who led his family a dog's life and was continually on the verge of starvation. After Christensen left Mina expected to hear from him con-stantly, but no letter ever reached her and as she had no idea to what part of the United States he went, she could not write to him. Among the young men of the town was Jensen, who also looked with loving eyes upon Mina, but she would have nothing to do with him, for her heart was true to Chris. As year after year went by with no word from her absent lover the maid came to the conclusion that he was recreant and this idea was fostered as much as possible by Jensen, who at last was successful in getting Mina's consent to marry him. The drunken father also insisted that the wedding should come off, and more to get away from such an unhancy home than away from such an unhappy home than through love for Jensen. Mina consented, and they were married. This was five years ago. After two years of hard times in the old country Jensen determined to try his fortunes in America, and with his wife and one child he started for the New World. After wandering about for some time, they landed in Nebraska with no money. Jensen obtained work on farms in differen parts of the state, but was unable to get ahead financially. The man and wife drifted over the state, doing work at such places as they could get employment, until at last they reached this city, and about a month ago they heard that a man and woman were wanted to work on a farm in the western part of the county. Jensen applied for the place, and as chance would have it the man and woman were employed on the farm of Christensen, but the people were so changed that no recognition was had. Something familiar in the woman's appearance led Christensen to make in-quiries, and he discovered that it was his Jensen or his wife, but a few shrewd questions showed him that Jensen knew more about the reason for his letters never reach-acknowledge. One evening he began telling a story to one evening he began tening a story to his hired man and wife and recounted the whole story of his life from beginning to the present. He told how Jensen had taken the letters from the postoffice and destroyed them, and when he got through the latter was so overcome with what he thought was Chris-tensen's knowledge that he confessed his infamy. The three talked long into the infamy. The three talked long into the night about the matter, and before the morning came it was decided that Jensen would give up the woman who openly said that she did not love him, and he agreed to get a divorce and give up his wife and child if Christensen would give him a start in the world. Mina was willing and anxions, and the result was that the deed to the eighty acres of land was passed, and the woman is now living as the wife of Christensen. A divorce was procured and the followed on the Jensen lives at the farm until he can build a house, and the whole lot seem happy over the new turn of affairs that basis Governor Buchanan sent a requisition to Texas for Carsaut, two weeks ago When arrested, Carsaut obtained a writ of habeas corpus, and wrote to Columbia asking on what terms a compromise could be made. Mr. Dobbins replied that prose-cution would be withdrawn if Carsaut would transfer the lot back to Mrs. Adams and pay all expenses.

Carsaut obtained the writ of habeas corpus on the ground that the requisition had been issued to collect debt, which is unlawful, and on the same grounds Gov-ernor Hogg of Texas was induced to ask Governor Buchanan to withdraw the requisition When the telegram asking for withdrawal of the requisition was handed to Governor

Buchanan, he promptly replied by wire that Carsaut had been indicted for false pretense, a criminal offense, and that if found guilty he should be punished. Wherefore, C. K. Carsaut will be brought back to Tennessee.
